

Robert Welch®

DINING

Robert Welch Cutlery

Robert Welch cutlery is becoming widely recognised as one of the finest collections in the world.

Robert Welch Designs use the highest quality (18/10) stainless steel for the forks and spoons. The knives are forged from a single ingot of specially hardened stainless steel for a fine cutting edge.

Contour Steak Knife Set

The Contour steak knife features hand finished and oiled walnut handles with traditional stainless steel rivets. The blade is serrated at the optimum cutting area, so when the knife is laid on the table the cutting edge does not come in contact with the surface.

The Contour Steak Knife Set includes 4 steak knives in a black storage box.

CARING FOR YOUR CUTLERY

Thank you for choosing Robert Welch cutlery. We would like you to take a few minutes to read this information on how to enjoy and protect the beauty and durability of your purchase.

“Stainless” really means “stain resistant” and Robert Welch products are made from the finest quality, specially developed stainless steel. Spoons and forks are made with finest 18/10 stainless steel that is 18% chrome 10% nickel. Knives are usually 13% chrome with hardened blades to retain a cutting edge; so by following these simple tips you can maintain your cutlery as near as possible to its original condition.

Washing by hand

It is the kindest way to wash cutlery, but remember that leaving it to soak first is not recommended, nor should you let it drain and dry on its own afterwards as this may leave watermarks.

Washing in a domestic dishwasher

When the wash cycle has finished take a few moments to remove your cutlery and restore its natural sheen by polishing with a dry soft cloth. This is especially important for knives as they are made from a different steel and are prone to corrosion if left in the moist atmosphere of the drying cycle.

Don't mix silverware items with steel in your dishwasher, as it will leave marks on the silverware which cannot be removed.

Avoid using the rinse & hold cycle with cutlery as it is just the same as prolonged soaking.

Washing in an industrial dishwasher

Robert Welch use the highest grade of stainless steel which will withstand heavy use of an industrial dishwasher. It is advised to clean the cutlery on its own, with no pots or pans as dirt can be attracted onto the stainless steel cutlery.

A simple mid temperature wash and dry will easily keep the cutlery maintained. Ensure your dishwasher is regularly cleaned and the right level of salts are added to soften the water. Do not leave the cutlery in standing water and polish with a dry soft cloth as soon as possible.

Don't mix silverware items with steel in any dishwasher, as it will leave marks on the silverware which cannot be removed.

Avoid using a rinse & hold cycle with cutlery as it is just the same as prolonged soaking.

The kinder way

A soapy sponge or cloth will remove most unwanted stains. But if the marking is more persistent, avoid scouring with pads or abrasive cleaners. It's much kinder and easier to use a soft cloth with a branded stainless steel cleaning cream.

Common causes of unwanted marks

RUST MARKS
Stainless steel can't rust but it can receive marks of rust from other items in your sink or dishwasher such as steel wool or non-stainless steel implements.

RAINBOWS
There are numerous causes for these temporary surface blemishes, e.g. detergents not rinsed off and allowed to dry on the cutlery, contact with very hot fat, or prolonged contact with salt, vinegar, egg, tomato sauce, acid fruits and wine.

CHALKING
Chalky streaks may appear as the result of unsoftened water being left to dry on your cutlery either in a dishwasher or at the side of your sink.

PITTING
This affects knives particularly because of the specially hardened steel from which they are crafted. The natural salts and acids present in food can cause pit marks if left on for a long period.
